

The Assistive Device Demonstration Centers

The NJ Division of the Deaf and Hard of Hearing (DDHH) maintains two Assistive Device Demonstration Centers: the Joseph Kohn Rehabilitation Center located at 130 Livingston Avenue in New Brunswick, NJ; and, the Brian C. Shomo Assistive Device Demonstration Center located on the campus of the Marie Katzenbach School for the Deaf (MKSD), 320 Sullivan Way, West Trenton, NJ. People who are deaf, hard of hearing, late-deafened, and deaf-blind can receive hands-on training in how to use the equipment at the demonstration centers. Service providers, family members, and others are also invited to receive demonstrations and use equipment.

These centers were established in collaboration with members of the DDHH Advisory Council, who developed plans for the centers and recommendations of equipment to display. Additionally, the blueprint for the New Brunswick center was provided in consultation with the New York League for the Hard of Hearing. The West Trenton center was constructed by MKSD staff and students.

What devices are on display?

More than forty-five pieces of equipment are available to visitors, including:

- Smoke and carbon monoxide detectors with visual and vibrating signaling;
- Alarm clocks for the home and travel;
- Assistive listening equipment for personal and television use. (FM and infrared systems);
- Notification products such as signalers receivers, and strobe flashers;
- Telephone products such as CapTel, amplifiers TTY's, VCO's, and a voice and TTY answering machine;
- Assistive equipment for the deaf-blind; and,
- Videophone, Video Relay Service, Internet Relay Service, and NJ Relay Service.

How to get the devices?

DDHH does not sell any of the technology displayed at the demonstration centers. There are several catalogs, along with a list of product vendors, on display where devices can be purchased. You can also inquire about your eligibility for applying to the DDHH Equipment Distribution Program at the centers.
